"Now, see here," said the man, "you know I have no ready money, but if you draw up these papers, I'll give you an interest in the well."

"I won't do it," said the lawyer, bluntly; "you have no money and are fast on the road to the poorhouse. No, I won't help you!"

"But you must," persisted the man; "you can do it. It won't cost you a cent, and you must do it. Go ahead now. If and you must do it. Go ahead now. If I lose, it is nothing out of your pocket. Draw up these papers, you've nothing else to do."

Well, the lawyer, to get rid of the man, drew up the agreement and took as his pay an interest in the oil well.

What happened?

The oil well was a gusher and the thick, greasy fluid poured out over the derrick and made the poor devils who were putting down the well fairly howl were putting down the well fairly howl with glee. The Robbery of a Street Car Driver on Cuming Street.

His Cash Box and Watch Made Away With-The Trouble of Another Driver on the Green Line.

The bold and successful robbery of a street car driver on Cuming street last Thursday might has caused considerable excitement in the city, and as rumors of a strike among the street car drivers in Omaha have been flying thick and fast for a week past, a reporter wishing to ascertain to what extent the strike had progressed, halled car No. IS on the green line several days ago, and, making his way through the crowded car to the front platform, ingratiated himself into the good graces of the genial driver, and learned from that gentleman the following particulars of the strike in question: "Strike, did you say? Well, I do not know, there may be some talk of a strike, but if there is I know nothing about it. I think the drivers here in Omaha are paid about as well as the drivers anywhere else, and have about the same hours; but if you want to know something of a strike, I can tell you of a strike I came near going on about a month ago. You see," continued the driver, growing confidential, "for the last three years I have been a sufferer from that lothsome disease, catarrh, brought on by careless exposure, and had it so bad that I got tired of myself and everything. At night time while in bed I would have a dropping in the back of my throat which would almost strangle me, it would keep me awake the best part of the night, my breath was extremely offensive; why I was ashamed to go near any person on account of it, I could not retaid what little food I managed to eat, and would halk and spit all day, I had a buzzing and roaring in my cars. I tried patent medicines to no end without relief, and tried several local doctors with the same result, and had about made up my mind to go on a strike to some other climate for my health when I read an advertisement of Drs. McCdy & Henry, and passing their office every day and seeing so many people alling there I concluded there must be some thing in it, I called on them and commenced treatment at once." "And with what result' queried the scribe, "Well, I have been under their t lungs are now affected. With this there are often streaks of blood mixed with the mucus. In some cases the patient becomes very pale, has fever, and expectorates before any cough ameers. has fever, and expectorates before any cough appears.

In some cases small masses of cheesy substance are spit up, which, when pressed between the fingers, emit a bad odor. In other cases, particles of a hard, chalky nature are spit up. The raising of cheesy or chalky lumps in dieare serious mischief at work in the lumps.

In some cases catarrh will extend into the lungs in a few weeks; in other cases it may be months, and even years, before the disease as tacks the lungs sufficiently to cause serious interference with the general health. When the disease has developed to such a point the patient is said to have catarrhal consumption. With bronchial catarrh there is more or less fever which differs with the different parts of the day-slight in the morning, higher in the afternoon and evening.

SNEEZING CATARRH.

What It Means, How It Acts, and Whal

It Is. You sneeze when you get up in the morning, you try to sneeze your nose off every time you are exposed to the least draft of air. You have a fullness over the front of the forehead, and the nose feels as if there was a plug in each nostril which you cannot dislodge. You blow your nose until your ears crack, but it don't do any good, and the only result is that you succeed in getting up a very red nose, and you so irrictate the lining membrane of that organ that you are unable to breathe through it at all. This is a correct and not overdrawn picture of an acute attack of catarrh, or "Sneezing Catarrh" as it is called.

Now, what does this condition indicate? First, a cold that causes mucus to be poured out by the glands in the nose; then those diseased glands are attacked by swarms of little germs—the catarrh germ—that fleat in the air in a locatity where the disease is prevalent. Those animalculae, in their efforts to find a lodgment, irritate the sensitive membrane lining of the nose and nature undertakes to rid herself of them by producing a fit of sneezing.

When the nose becomes filled with thickened diseased mucus the natural channels for the introduction of air into the lungs is interfered with, and the person so effected must breathe through the mouth, and by such means the throat becomes parched and dry, snoring is produced, and then the catarrhal disease gain ready access to the throat and lungs.
